Stampede March

By Randall D. Standridge

Program Notes

I've always had a soft spot for Westerns.

The sweeping landscapes. The stoic heroes. The tension, the grit... and the music. The score to The Magnificent Seven (the Yul Brynner version, of course) was one of my first musical obsessions, and it opened the door to other favorites like Silverado and The Cowboys. Composers like Elmer Bernstein, Bruce Broughton, and John Williams crafted music that was bold, memorable, and just plain fun—and Stampede March is my way of tipping my hat to them.

Stampede March blends traditional form with the cinematic energy of classic Western film scores. You'll hear galloping rhythms, vibrant orchestration, and a healthy dose of personality. The piece is written in mixolydian mode, giving it that open, frontier feel, and it's packed with playful touches—woodblocks for hoofbeats, whip cracks, and yes, even trumpet horse whinnies (because why not?).

As a composer, I'm always trying to push the boundaries of what a march can be. I love the form, but I also love shaking it up a bit—giving students and audiences something familiar, but with a twist. Stampede March is all about that blend: tradition meets trail ride, Sousa meets Silverado.

It's accessible, energetic, and perfect for concert or festival settings. Whether you use it to open the show, end the program, or just ride off into the musical sunset, I hope this piece puts a little more hitch in your band's giddy-up.

Rehearsal suggestions

- The tempo of this work is critical to its character. When planning your preparation, make sure to allow time for proper technical development to achieve the written tempos, lest the work come off as "boring."
- Dynamics should be noticeable and taken to extremes.
- Percussion should be on the higher end of dynamic balance. Do not hide them.
