Foreword

Spring sounds: Light poetry on the piano

"Spring Sounds: Light poetry on the piano" has been specially selected to capture the magical mood of spring in easily accessible piano pieces. The works are simplified and reduced to their musical essence, so that you can dive right into the melodies and enjoy the poetic lightness of spring on the piano without much practice.

This collection is designed for beginners as well as pianists with a few years of experience. In this edition you can expect famous pieces such as "Spring: I. Allegro" by Antonio Vivaldi, which for centuries has been the epitome of reflecting the freshness and energy of the beginning of spring in music. For moments of tranquility and to capture the beauty of a spring morning, Edvard Grieg's "Morning Mood" is ideal. Wolfgang Amadeus Mozart's "Longing for spring" expresses the anticipation and longing for warm spring days. With "May — Starlit Nights" by Pyotr Ilyich Tchaikovsky, you can musically tell the story of those magical spring nights when nature is in full bloom. Finally, Robert Schumann's "Spring song" embodies the joie de vivre and optimism of the season.

These works are the musical embodiment of spring and are perfect for trying out spring melodies on the piano without much practice. You can also use these pieces to quickly create an appropriate spring concert program to present to your family and friends.

The simplicity of this collection will make it easy for you to learn and enjoy. You may even be inspired to try some of the original works also published in the Classicato series. Let this edition inspire you to express the lightness and poetry of spring on the piano. May the music accompany and enrich you during this wonderful season.
